Family Testimonials

From Maria A.

- ▶ We have three young children, all of which started their dance career at Dance Works at the age of 3. DW is not just a place we drop our kids off a few hours a week, it has become an extension of our family. Our oldest, Marley is entering her 7th year of dance, most if not all of those years dancing with the same group of girls. She has loved dance since day one but I really started to see her true love emerge 3 years ago when she joined the competition team, she is currently practicing for her 1st solo. I have always been proud of her but to watch your child have a 30 minute session four days in a row to learn a 2 minute routine, she blew me away. By day 4 I was still trying to remember the first 8 count and she had the whole routine completely memorized! Her level of commitment & dedication to do what is expected of her and take initiative to practice at home is more than I would have ever imagined! Our 7 year old daughter Memphis is beginning her 5th year as a dancer, over the years I have seen her blossom from a nervous, self conscious little girl to a strong, confident young lady. A few years ago she would have tears streaming down her cheeks as I dropped her off for her 1 hour a week class, her tears were pure nerves all though she was excited and loved it her nervousness would take over. Fast forward to this past year, there were weeks she was at dance for 5 hours a week & upset it wasn't more. Memphis has found love and acceptance from the high school girls that lifts her confidence to levels I didn't know was possible at her age. Our youngest is our 5 year old son Miles, while we realize dance isn't the first pick for every little boy, for Miles it just made sense. He already spent so much time at the studio with his big sisters not to mention he can't contain himself when he hears music. His behavior can push limits more often than not, but when he is at DW he tries to be on his best behavior he knows what Miss Lisa expects of him and he doesn't want to let her or any of the DW staff down. Being a dancer at Dance Works means so much to each of our children, the relationships that both our kids and ourselves have gained will last a lifetime. Dance Works has helped teach my kids commitment, dedication, sportsmanship, camaraderie, patience, support, correction, maturity, friendship, respect and a pure love for dance.
